Book shows misery of Inanda

AN illustration booklet on forced removals in the North Coast district of Inanda has recently been published by Durban freelance photographer Omar Badsha.

Entitled Imijondolo, this photographic essay reflects the lives, loves and harrowing struggles of the people of Inanda and their bitter battles against forced removals over the years.

Inanda is a massive shack settlement which is home to about a quarter of a million black and Indian people who have been ravaged by disease caused by unhealthy living conditions. Text is by Heather Hughes, a lecturer in the Department of African Studies at the University of Natal.

The book is distributed by Raven Press.
