INTRODUCTION

The Black Community Programmes publishes this handbook of Black Organisations in the hope that it will serve as a record of activities carried out by black organisations in South Africa.

We hope that the handbook will be an effective way of introducing these organisations not only to each other but also to the public so that there is a clearer understanding of what each of the organisations is involved in doing and also the geographical situation of the organisations, but more importantly bring into focus the elements common in their aims and objectives, namely self-help, self-reliance and self-determination.

It is hoped that the book will serve as an authoritative source of reference for information pertaining to the organisations and assist community leaders like clergymen, social workers, teachers, sociologists, businessmen and administrators in the course of their daily work in the black community.

The compilation of this handbook started towards the end of 1972 when the Black Community Programmes sent out questionnaires and in some cases field workers, to complete schedules on organisations that are autonomous i.e. those organisations working in the black community who have full authority to make decisions regarding policy, administration and programmes.

For this reason not all organisations 'doing work' in the Black community are included here. An example of the kind of organisations which we did not regard as Black organisations are those whose policy-making bodies are either completely non-black or the majority of the members on the governing body are other than black. Such organisations we do not regard as autonomous even if the actual committee carrying out the programmes is all black.

We are however aware that there are several organisations which are in the process of assuming full responsibility for their work, some are adopting new constitutions that will reflect a more representative distribution of power in Controlling Bodies of their organisations. As these organisations assume their independence, we will naturally get in touch with them and include them in our next publication.

We have recorded information about the activities of organisations as we were told by representatives of organisations; in some cases we have recorded information from constitutions of organisations when these were given to us. We therefore do not claim that the information will in all cases be absolutely accurate at the time of reading, since some amendments in constitutions could have taken place since we conducted the interviews. Where such action has taken place we would appreciate it if the officials would let us know so that we can update the information regarding their organisation.

For better presentation the organisations have been categorised into Cultural, Educational, Political, Professional, Self-Help, Student, Religious, Youth and Welfare.

Finally we would like to thank those individuals and officials of organisations who co-operated with us in this task which we hope will prove of benefit to all organisations. There are other organisations which could have been left out by oversight or because we did not know such organisations existed. This was inevitable but we request the help of such organisations in providing us with up to date information regarding their work. The best way might be for such organisations to contact us and we will send them a questionnaire or send one of our researchers to visit them.
