A PERMANENT Force member, convicted of killing a motorist who had given him a lift, was sentenced in the Pretoria Supreme Court to 35 years' jail yesterday.

New targets now for the ANC, says expert

THE attacks on the Escom and Pretoria Municipal power stations appeared to reflect a switch by the outlawed African National Congress to a new priority target in South Africa's industrial power base, Mr Michael Spicer, of the Institute of International Affairs, said yesterday.

Last year's attacks on Sasol plants by ANC insurgents seemed to identify them as the ANC's prime industrial target, but developments since then may have made power stations the chief objective of saboteurs, he said.

He identified the changes since the June 1980 attacks on Sasol as:

- The glut on the world oil market, which made it easier for South Africa to buy oil and therefore rendered it less vulnerable to disruption of production at the Sasol plants.
- The shortage of power, as evidenced by the power supply cuts last week and warnings by Escom officials that further cuts could be expected until next year.

Mr Spicer said: "The oil glut may have caused the ANC to cast around for a different weak point and the shortage of electricity may have handed them one on a plate."

One of the ANC's major long term aims, he added, was to disrupt South Africa's economic growth — on which plans to contain and eventually cut back black unemployment depend.

US team unlikely to meet Mandela

By AMEEN AKHALWALA

A REQUEST by a United States congressional delegation to meet Mr Nelson Mandela, the ANC leader jailed on Robben Island, has been forwarded to the South African Government.

But unless there is a major change in the Government's attitude, the request is unlikely to be granted.

The spokesman for the US Embassy in Pretoria confirmed yesterday that the request by the 13-strong delegation, comprising members of the House of Representatives and other Congressmen interested in African affairs, had been relayed to the Government.

Dr Hough said the ANC's "armed struggle" had avoided indiscriminate attacks on civilians as part of its quest for "international legitimacy".

He saw the sabotage of railway lines without major derailments and loss of life as a consequence of deliberate policy rather than sheer chance.

According to diplomatic sources, the Government rarely — if ever — gives reasons for refusing permission to visiting politicians to meet the ANC leader.

The Congressional delegation's visit comes at a time of growing Third World displeasure at the Reagan administration's attitude towards South Africa.

The delegation will be headed by the new chairman of the House Africa sub-committee, Mr Harold Wolpe, a Democrat.

According to a Washington report, the members want to discuss with Mandela the situation he saw evolving in South Africa.

This would enable them to determine whether there remained a possibility for evolutionary instead of violent change in South Africa.

Mandela and other ANC members are serving life sentences on Robben Island after being convicted of sabotage in 1964.

The congressional delegation leaves the US next week, and will also visit Nigeria, Angola, Zimbabwe, Kenya, Somalia and Ethiopia.

Bokkies find it's chilly outside...

By DAN RETIEF

The ragged edge facing the Boks. Mr John White, president of the Poverty Bay Rugby Union, holds one of the broken bottles scattered by demos over the field to be used for the Boks' first match.

GISBORNE. — Shopowners in this seaside town as big — and not unlike — Oudtshoorn have experienced a sudden rush on certain items this week which have probably lain on the shelves for quite some time.

The Springboks, accompanied by a large contingent of South African journalists and a few fans from Australia, have all discovered the same thing — it's bitterly cold, uncomfortably wet and it pays to keep warm and dry.

So "wellies", water-proofs, raincoats and fleec-lined parkas have proved popular items among the visitors.

Johan Claassen, the Springbok manager, led the rush to buy a pair of Wellington boots and looks the picture of a landed gentleman as he watches the Boks all play, puffing at his pipe with his hat cap at a slightly jaunty angle.

For the first two days the weather conspired to remove any doubts the Boks might have entertained about its severity.

On Monday a super-chilled wind blew in from the South Pole and yesterday it rained.

The Boks seem to enjoy the novelty of it all — the learning of new techniques.

But for how long? Can this side retain its good humour and easy attitude towards playing rugby in the face of the difficult living conditions which have been imposed on them?

For the first three days of their stay in New Zealand the Springboks were ensconced in an impenetrable laager. And the stringent security is unlikely to be eased.

Each of them was supplied with an identity card bearing his photograph and police stood guard at a barrier thrown across the only entrance to their hotel.

All other entrances were sealed off and yesterday, for instance, nobody other than their authorised journalists from local news services was allowed into the Boks' hotel — unless, of course, there was

NZ police seize the glass demos

GISBORNE. — Anti-apartheid protesters crashed a Landrover through the gates of the Gisborne Football Ground yesterday and scattered sacks of broken glass over the playing area.

The field was the venue of today's clash between the Springboks and Poverty Bay.

Police said the Landrover, with its engine revving, crashed through the gates and swerved backwards and forwards across the rugby field while the occupants emptied glass, bottles and tacks.

Three women and a man were arrested, they said.

Local rugby club members, including some of the Springboks' opponents in the first game of the controversial tour, were called in to pick up the jagged debris and worked by torchlight as darkness fell.

The Poverty Bay Rugby Union chairman, Mr Jim Duncan, described the raid as "a filthy trick by vandals and larrikins."

Police later parked a large truck across the gate entrance to prevent similar raids. A spokesman for the country's largest anti-tour group, Hart, said his organisation was not involved.

The gate-crashing was in sharp contrast to a warm traditional welcome given the 30 tourists on Monday night by 600 Maoris.

The South Africans joined the Maoris in singing and dancing but demonstrators outside the grounds shouted "shame" at those attending the festivities.

Court dispute over 'Wits student'

Mail Reporter

A WITS student held under security legislation shortly after flag-burning incidents on the campus appeared in the Johannesburg Regional Court yesterday in a day-long bail application.

Mr Ernest Kgaone, 23, is being held while a charge of fraud is investigated against him.

At the end of yesterday's hearing, his advocate told the magistrate the bail application was "not a trial" after extensive evidence regarding Mr Kgaone's allegedly fraudulent student card was led — without details of the fraud charge being specified.

The application was postponed until today and Mr Kgaone was remanded in custody. Mr Kgaone was detained by police on June 12 in terms of security legislation.

While in detention he made a statement to a Johannesburg magistrate. Mr F S Sassen on his alleged involvement in the flag-burning incidents during Anti-Republic Day protests in May this year.

Amidst extensive publicity and mounting State and business pressure following the incidents, the university authorities announced that persons involved in the burning were not students.

Shortly after Mr Kgaone's detention, it was announced that he too was not a student.

In yesterday's hearing, Mr E Dane, for the defence, said he surmised from comments made by the prosecutor, Mr A van Wyk, that the fraud charge related to an allegedly false registration card identifying Mr Kgaone as a student.

Mr Kgaone told the Court he was a registered Commerce student in his second year of study.

He first registered at Wits in 1979 when he paid his own fees with money largely obtained through selling the ecumenical newspaper, "Voice".

The following two years of study were paid for by the South African Council of Churches and the Coca Cola corporation respectively, he said.

In evidence for the State, the Wits Academic Registrar, Mr Ken Standemacher said it was possible for a student to be registered without having an up-to-date student card.

"This could come about if the student did not follow all the necessary registration procedures — which included having student cards updated at the start of each academic year — he said.

During cross-examination by Mr Dane, he admitted he could not definitely say Mr Kgaone had not paid fees for his years at the university.

He said he understood Ernest had written university examinations although he did not know for what purpose.

He would not get any credit for those exams if he wasn't registered," he said. The hearing was postponed for further evidence.

Flood toll now 800

PEKING. — The worst floods for decades in the upper reaches of China's Yangtze River killed between 700 and 800 people last week, far fewer than the earlier estimate of 4 000 dead, a flood control official said yesterday.

Naas Botha and Errol Tobias are the best-known of the Boks in New Zealand. Tobias has attracted intense interest because of his position as the first black Springbok — to the extent that a front-page article registered the fact that he shares a room with one of his white teammates. Hell, that's not even news in South Africa anymore.

Botha, not surprisingly, is singled out because of his phenomenal goal-kicking. Clearly, the Springbok flyhalf will be a marked man.

But then again, so are all the Springboks.

Quiet returns to mine as most strikers go back to work

Labour Reporter

STRIKING workers at the ERPM mine at Boksburg returned to work yesterday after management had held discussions with them in their compound — but 40 workers decided to leave the mine and return home.

A Rand Mines spokesman said the strike had resulted in the loss of 3 000 tons production, about a third of the mine's daily output. The mine had now returned to normal, he added.

According to reports, police are holding 110 workers for questioning in connection with the unrest at the mine in which hostel windows were broken, a barn burnt down and earth moving equipment slightly damaged.

A police spokesman said last night he could not give the exact number of workers who had been arrested.

The workers struck in support of wage demands. The introduction of a new death benefit scheme on the mines is also believed to have been a factor in the unrest.

ERPM's deputy chairman, Mr Tony Honnet, said yesterday the unrest had ended "as quickly as it began".

He said it appeared to have been mainly due to the fact that this year's wage increase had not been as high as last year's.

"When workers gathered in the compound, there were constant cries of 'money, money'," Mr Honnet said.

Although the recently-introduced death benefit scheme on the mines had not been raised directly, Mr Honnet said, the issue had been raised on several occasions by the mine's black liaison committee.

Mr Honnet said that, despite earlier reports, ERPM had briefed workers on the new scheme, both through the liaison committee and in writing.
