

The Preparatory Examination has been going on for six months. So far evidence seems to centre in the expression by the accused of certain opinions concerning race relations.

Whether these opinions were, in fact, expressed, it is not for us to say. Nor do we necessarily agree with these opinions.

"A free country," said Mr. Adlai Stevenson, "is one in which it is safe to express unpopular opinions."

Will You Help Us to Defend Freedom of Speech in South Africa?
