

Victim findings

■ Unknown victims

Many unnamed and unknown South Africans were the victims of gross violations of human rights during the Commission's mandate period. Their stories came to the Commission in the stories of other victims and in the accounts of perpetrators of violations.

Like other victims of political conflict and violence in South Africa, they experienced suffering and injury. Some died, some lost their homes. Many experienced the loss of friends, family members and a livelihood. Some experienced brutality at the hands of the security forces or vigilante groups. Others experienced ill-treatment at the hands of members of the liberation movements and other political organisations.

The unknown victims of human rights violations in South Africa were not necessarily aligned to any particular political organisation or party. Neither were they confined to a particular province or region in the country. Men and women, young and old alike fell victim to the violence and suffering spawned by Apartheid.

In spite of efforts to trace the individuals involved, the Commission was unable to establish their identities.

AARON, Thabo Simon (22), an ANCYL member, was shot and severely injured by SAP members at Lephoi, Bethulie, OFS, on 17 April 1991. Police opened fire on a gathering at an ANC supporter's house following a dispute between two neighbours, one of whom was linked to the ANC and the other to the SAP and a councillor.

ABBOTT, Montaigne (23), a member of the SADF, was severely injured in a landmine explosion in Messina, Tvl, on 5 May 1987.

ABDUL WAHAB, Zakier (30), a member of QIBLA, disappeared in September 1988 after fleeing the country for political reasons. He had been detained several times before he left South Africa.

ABRAHAM, Nzaliseko Christopher (17), a COSAS supporter, was kicked and beaten with batons and rifle-butts by members of the Ciskei Police during protests against the Ciskei government at Zwelitsha and Mdantsane, Ciskei, in September 1985.
